

Rising Decan Physiognomy Model

Evidence from 432 timed horoscopes

Abstract

This study tests the ability of six astrological signifiers to predict the shape and features of the face. The six signifiers are (1) rising sign, (2) sign placement of ruler of rising sign, (3) planets in the rising sign, (4) rising decan, (5) sign placement of ruler of the rising decan, and (6) planets in the rising decan. Of these six signifiers, the sign placement of the ruler of the rising decan corresponded to the shape of the face for 92% of the sample, well above and beyond the results of any of the other five signifiers.

This study is a substantial revision and replaces my Working Paper on Astrological Physiognomy: Empirical Tests of the Leo Rising Decan (2010) based on 36 examples. The new data sample comprises 432 horoscopes and includes all possible permutations of signs, decans, and sign placements of the ruler of the rising decan. It is a companion to my Working Paper on Astrological Physiognomy: History and Sources (2010), now under revision with a planned completion date later in 2024.

Accordingly, this study concerns the practical testing of the most promising models of astrological physiognomy identified in the History and Sources literature review. The three models are (1) Abu Bakr's use of the rising decan, (2) Howard Cornell's assignment of the vital-motive-mental tripartite temperament system popularized by 19th century phrenologists to the sign modality, and (3) John Willner's astrological sign-based model for judging the shape of the face which like Cornell's model is also driven in part by sign modality. In addition, I include selected sign-based features identified by Judith Hill.

Abu Bakr is one of the few traditional astrologers who specifically incorporates the rising decan into a physiognomy model. Most authors defer to the rising sign alone. Cornell's adaptation of the phrenologist's temperament system to sign modality was the basis of the physiognomy model taught by Robert Zoller in his Diploma of Medieval Predictive Astrology. Willner is little known today, most likely because in order to fit his model to horoscope examples using only the rising sign, he created an idiosyncratic rectification software program which generated birth times as much as 3-4 hours earlier than stated birth times based on the psychic Edgar Cayce's finding that souls often incarnated several hours before birth. This is not an approach I can support; yet, Willner's observations on the shape of the face based on zodiac signs I have found extremely accurate. I differ from Willner by applying his model to the sign placement of the ruler of the rising decan, rather than the rising sign itself.

Considerations before Judgment

Decan system. Of the competing decan systems used, the decans based on the triplicity of signs is recommended for physiognomy. For each sign, the first decan is identical to the sign itself, the next decan is the next sign of the same triplicity moving in the order of the signs, and the third and last decan is the next sign of the same triplicity. For example: for the sign of Aries (30 degrees), the three decans are Aries (0-9 degrees), Leo (10-19 degrees), and Sagittarius (20-29 degrees). Robert Zoller referred to these as the Decans of Varahamihiri. Others refer to these as the Hindu decans or simply as the decans based on triplicity which is my practice here. The more commonly used Chaldean decans by Medieval astrologers do not work as predictors of physiognomy.

Face or body? This study focuses primarily on the shape of the face because face shots are more readily available compared to full body shots for study purposes. In some cases, I link the physiognomy significator for the face to the physical body. In any case, I have not yet worked out the difference between a physiognomy model for the shape of the face versus the body. Certainly for the first 10 degrees of the Ascendant which corresponds to the identical decan, there is no difference between physiognomy significators and we should expect equal application of physiognomy significators for both face and body whenever the first ten degrees of a sign rises. But for the 2nd and 3rd rising decans, in most cases the ruler of the Ascendant and the rising decan will be placed in different signs and give conflicting testimony. In these cases, physiognomy significators may differ for the head and body. This needs to be kept in mind for those who wish to test the physiognomy model for the body.

Age. The shape of the face does not fully form until after puberty. For males, the introduction of higher levels of testosterone increases the width of the face, especially at the jawline; more so than for females. It is therefore impossible to measure the shape of a child's face before puberty with any astrological physiognomy model. Likewise, the shape of the face often changes after menopause for both men and women; sometimes more fleshy, other times more bony. The implication is that astrological physiognomy best predicts the shape of the face after puberty but before old age. A sweet spot of between 30 and 50 years appears best suited for testing physiognomy models.

Sex. Most physiognomy models are written by men for men. Thus, Willner's characterization of fixed signs as squares and rectangles needs modification for females whose facial shape remains more ovate relative to male faces, even after puberty.

Sign Modality. There is a correspondence between cardinal, fixed, and mutable signs to the round/oval, square/rectangular, and elongated/triangular facial shapes. In addition, compared to model expectations, fixed signs yield the most consistent results; cardinal signs, reasonably so; mutable signs, much lower consistency with many variations.

Retrograde Planets. An unexpected research finding in the last ten years is that retrograde planets often behave as though they are placed in the opposite sign. This has implications for physiognomy, e.g., the ruler of the rising decan if retrograde. Examples in this sample support this rule in roughly half the cases when a planet is retrograde.

Sample Design and Results

The basic design of any astrological study requires the accuracy of birth chart data to be commensurate with the topic at hand. For instance, to test the impact of sect on horoscopes, one only needs to determine whether horoscopes are diurnal or nocturnal, e.g., whether the Sun is placed above or below the horizon. In this situation it is not necessary to know the Ascendant sign much less the exact degree of the Ascendant. At the other end of the spectrum are tests of specific predictive techniques like solar arc or primary directions which benefit from the highest level of possible accuracy, even down to the second.

As this study requires knowledge of both the rising sign and decan, the level of accuracy requires the Ascendant degree to fall in the correct ten-degree sign subdivision known as the rising decan. This is a more stringent requirement than simply knowing the rising sign which comprises 30 degrees of the complete sign. Because of the prevalence of rounded birth times in Astrodatbank and other errors, choosing a data sample with accurate rising decans is a more difficult bar to pass. For this reason, the bulk of the example horoscopes have Ascendant degrees which are in the middle of each decan, e.g., 4-6 degrees (middle of first 10 degrees); 14-16 degrees; and 24-26 degrees. There are some exceptions. This should minimize the chance that horoscopes with incorrect Ascendant degrees near decan boundaries are included in the sample, e.g., excluding a horoscope with 9 degrees of a sign rising should the 'true' Ascendant degree be 10 or higher.

Once selected, each horoscope is qualitatively judged on the contribution of each of the six signifiers to the shape of the face and facial features identified by the literature review. In some cases there is evidence of two or three influential signs. This is a qualitative judgment which is subject to significant confirmation bias. Six possible signifiers were considered: the rising sign, planets in the rising sign, and the ruler of the rising sign. Ditto for the rising decan, planets in the rising decan, and the ruler of the rising decan.

Table I. Correspondence between Physiognomy signifiers and the Shape of the Face.

ALL	27%	51%	18%	29%	92%	16%
------------	------------	------------	------------	------------	------------	------------

For the complete sample (“ALL”)

The rising sign itself contributed to the shape of the face 27% of the time.

Sign placement of the Ascendant ruler was successful 51% of the time. Recall that for 1/3 of the sample the Ascendant ruler will be identical to the rising decan ruler.

Planets in the Ascendant sign were successful in only 18% of the time. This raises questions on whether planets in the Ascendant sign can override the sign placement of significators in physiognomy. Structurally, this boils down to whether physiognomy can be modeled as a planetary-based or sign-based system. In other words, if Saturn is closely conjunct the Ascendant degree, is that person classified as a Saturn-type for physiognomy purposes no matter what sign Saturn is placed in? I mention Saturn here because my observations do show that Saturn conjunct the Ascendant degree does add Saturn’s melancholic nature to the physiognomy profile via darker coloration, more lines, and sharp edges to the face. These Saturnian effects were more noticeable than from effects from other planets conjunct the Ascendant degree. Yet whatever the impact of Saturn, it did not modify the overall shape of the face which remained a function of sign placements of either the rising sign or rising decan ruler.

Turning to the rising decan; its sign contributed to the shape of the face 29% of the time; ruler of the rising decan, 92%; and planets in the sign of the rising decan, 16%.

Note similar percentages for the rising sign (27%) and the rising decan (29%); as well as similar percentages for planets in the rising sign (18%) and planets in the rising decan (16%). The big winners are the sign placement of the Ascendant ruler (51%) and the sign placement of the ruler of the rising decan (92%).

Taking a Deep Dive: How to Explore this Study

Level I. 30 Minutes

For each zodiac sign, review the shape of the face and facial features.
Study the four photographs exemplars of each sign.

Level II. 60-90 Minutes

Play this game. Pick a single sign. Let’s take Aries as an example.

1. Review all Aries rising horoscopes (#1-36).
2. Review all Aries rising decans (#1-12, #169-180, #301-312)
3. Review all Aries rising decan rulers (1, 13, 25, 37, 49, 61, 73, 85, 97, 109, 121, 133, 145, 157, 169, 181, 193, 205, 217, 229, 241, 253, 265, 277, 289, 301, 313, 325, 337, 349, 361, 373, 385, 397, 409, 421)

Based on the results of this study, as you move from rising sign to rising decan to rising decan ruler, you should find greater similarity in appearance among these three data sets.

Level III. Independent Study

Use www.astro-seek.com's search engine to test the proposed model.

In response to this data request your list should begin this way:

Geena Davis (*Jan 21, 1956)	actress	 US
Jennifer Aniston (*Feb 11, 1969)	actress, director	 US
Nastassja Kinski (*Jan 24, 1961)	actress	 DE
Jon Hall (*Feb 26, 1915)	actor	 US
George Harrison (*Feb 24, 1943)	composer, guitarist, singer	 GB
William McKinley (*Jan 29, 1843)	25th President of the United States	 US
Nicole Fontaine (*Jan 16, 1942)	Member of the European Parliament, MEP	 FR
Carole King (*Feb 9, 1942)	composer, singer	 US
Eddie Van Halen (*Jan 26, 1955)	guitarist	 NL
James G. Abourezk (*Feb 24, 1931)	politician	 US

Begin to review horoscopes with photos and record your results. Be sure and review a large variety of photographs by clicking on 'images' after searching an individual's name. For Carole King:

What I see for Carole King is a rectangular face and curly hair of Leo. This is consistent with rising decan ruler Mercury/Aquarius-retrograde functioning in the opposite sign of Leo. Other search result findings should manifest Aquarius features, the sign placement of the ruler of the rising decan, as long as that ruler is in direct motion.

Will you be able to replicate a 92% contribution of the rising decan ruler as a contributor to the shape of the face? Given rounded birthtimes, unlikely. For instance, in my separate study on the soul comprised of over 400 rectified birth times, I found that for 271 horoscopes with Rodden Ratings of AA, A, B, or C that only 182 or 67% had the correct sign and that only 114 or 42% had the correct rising sign AND rising decan. Be that as it may, we work with what we have. While replication of this study by independent researchers is unlikely to achieve the results presented in Table I, I would still expect a similar ranking in significators with the rising sign and rising decan ruler contributing a higher relative contribution to physiognomy compared to other significators.

A Note on Photographs. Wherever possible, photographs were taken from Wikimedia Commons with proper citations and licenses included. What the Signs Look Like

In the companion Working Paper on Astrological Physiognomy: History and Sources, I summarized sign-based rules for judging the face as follows:

Sign	General Features of the Head and Face
Aries	Long in the face, broad forehead.
Taurus	Face is full, broad forehead; large nostrils, mouth, and eyes.
Gemini	Elongated, handsome, agreeable/beautiful eyes.
Cancer	Face is large, wide, and round; sunken eyes, lack of uniformity in teeth.
Leo	Face is round, large forehead, sharp eyes, rugged/handsome.
Virgo	Eyes, nostrils, lips, and chin features are small and drawn into the face.
Libra	Finely-formed and well-proportioned. No dominant features.
Scorpio	Face is large, narrow forehead, intense eyes, sharp nose, coarse hair.
Sagittarius	Well-shaped, long beard, forehead proportional but emphasized.
Capricorn	Face is small, bones are prominent, sharp chin.
Aquarius	Face is large, handsome.
Pisces	Face is small, abundant hair.

This list is primarily drawn from Rhetorius-Teucer of Babylon, ps.-Pythagoras, Dorotheus, and Ibn Ezra. Beyond this descriptor list from traditional authors there are two other sources I utilize based on my experience with this material over the last twenty years.

Sign Modality. The American phrenological tradition introduced by the Fowler family in the 1830s proposed a three-fold temperament system which the American medical astrologer Howard Cornell later linked to sign modality and shape of the face.

Fowler Temperament	Sign Modality	Shape of Face
Mental	Cardinal	Round/Oval
Vital	Fixed	Square/Rectangular
Motive	Mutable	Triangular

John Willner's Model. Largely consistent with traditional descriptors and findings of the Fowlers and Howard Cornell, Willner added his own refinements.

	Cardinal		Fixed		Mutable
AR	Bony Ovate	TA	Soft Rectangular	GE	Elongated Rectangle
CA	Small Ovate	LE	Rectangular	VI	Triangular
LI	Compressed Ovate	SC	Rectangular	SA	Elongated Rectangle
CP	Ovate (with ears)	AQ	Square	PI	Fluid Triangular

In the twelve pages which follow, Willner's drawings are included at the top right of each page together with classical and modern drawings of the glyphs. Next are four photographs of what I consider exemplars of each sign's physiognomy traits. A keyword summary for the head and face follows. These keywords are referenced in bold in the sample's 432 entries.

114	258	186	270

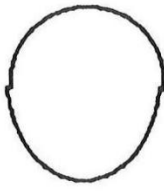

VIRGO – Keyword Summary for the Head and Face

Face: Small, oval/round upper head, tapered chin, upturned chin, triangular

Nose and Lips: Drawn, narrow relative to width of face

Hair: Pointed beards (for men) including Van Dyke, Handlebar and Chin Puff, and other styles with a pointed tip

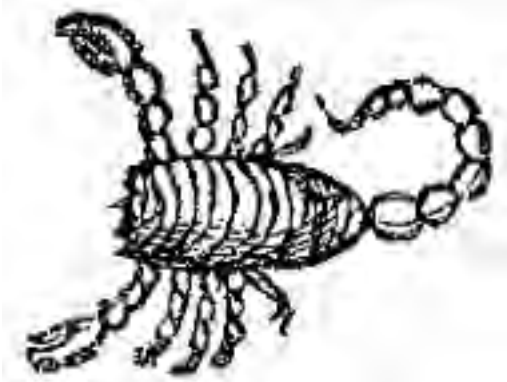

Skin tone: The absence of lines which gives the illusion of youth, skin is fair and plain “as if needs a makeover”

	Libra	Compressed Ovate

259	127	295	379

LIBRA – Keyword Summary for the Head and Face

Face: compressed ovate, egg-shaped, forehead high and full, prominent cheekbones, absence of irregular features

	Scorpio	Rectangular
	♏
	♏

260	080	428	356

SCORPIO – Keyword Summary for the Head and Face

Face: Rectangular, accented cheekbones, prominent lower jaw, thick

Hair/Men: texture is coarse and thick. Scorpio is the hairiest sign in the zodiac. Also for men, widow's peak or moustache with or without a beard which mimics the scorpion's pincers

Hair/Women: pincers are evoked with blunt, wispy, choppy bangs across forehead or two prominent bangs which frame either side of the face

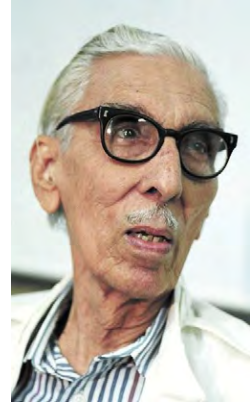

Hair/Both sexes: salt and pepper hair, contrasting white and black streaks (skunk-like appearance known as poliosis)

Nose: Large, beak-like

Eyes: Penetrating gaze

Skin tone: dark complexion, contrast between color of eyebrows and forehead

	Sagittarius	Elongated
	♐
	♐

033	177	297	429

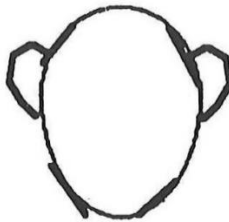

SAGITTARIUS – Keyword Summary for the Head and Face

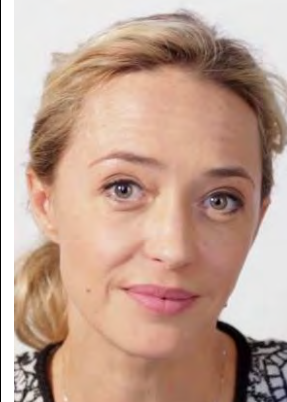

Face: Elongated rectangle, horse-shaped

Hair: Long and free-flowing. Longest hair of any zodiac sign

Nose: Long and straight

Mouth: Broad with large teeth, outlined by diamond-shaped creases especially when smiling

	Capricorn	Ovate
	♄
	♑

154	334	130	190

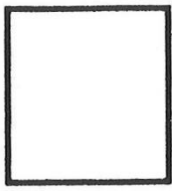

CAPRICORN – Keyword Summary for the Head and Face

Face: Ovate, football-shaped, goat-like, prominent chin, chiselled-look supported by well-defined bone structure.

Hair/Men: beard or tufts of hair on chin like a billy goat

Notable: Protruding ears, the only zodiac sign with any distinctive ear features.

Mouth: Small and tight

	Aquarius	Square

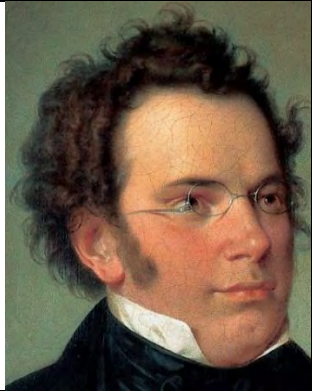

083	371	023	311

AQUARIUS – Keyword Summary for the Head and Face

Face: Square, rectangular-shaped forehead like a bull dozer’s blade,

Notable: Wavy creases in forehead which mimic the Aquarius glyph

	Pisces	Fluid Triangular
	♓
	♛

96	120	036	216

PISCES – Keyword Summary for the Head and Face

Face: round, plump/fleshy, lack of structure in lower face near chin, double chin, fluid triangular shape.

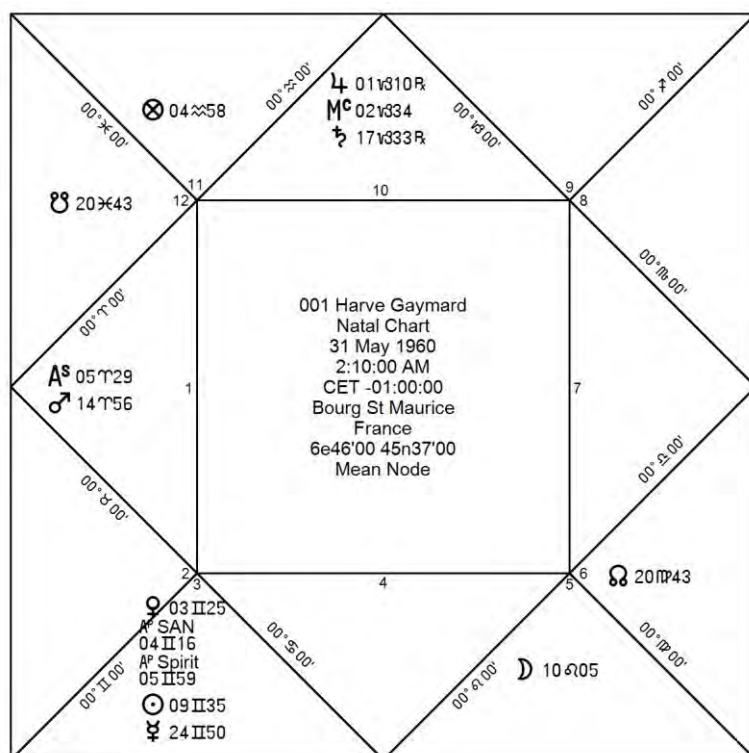

Eyes/lips: protruding, fish-like; yet eyes are sometimes sunken

Complexion: smooth but not as fair as Cancer; Jupiter's contribution of hot/wet can make skin appear blotchy.

While the fullness of the face is not inconsistent with Taurus as the sign of the rising decan, the soft rectangular shape of Taurus is not evident. If anything, the round shape and “ Man in the Moon ” look is more consistent with Sun/Cancer as the physiognomy significator. The Sun’s testimony rests on rulership of the Ascendant by exaltation and placement at the inferior square aspect within four degrees. See #172 for similar facial appearance with both Mars and Sun in Cancer.

Shape of face is the bony ovate of Aries consistent with Aries rising. Compared to the expectation of the round shape of Cancer based on the rising decan model and predicted by rising decan ruler Mars in Cancer, Rooney maintains the bony ovate shape of Aries. Mutual reception of Moon/Aries and Mars/Cancer by sign rulership is the most likely reason why the Aries shape is retained without any Cancer influence.

Face presents a round upper forehead with partial male pattern baldness and a rectangular lower half . This appears a mix of Leo and Cancer traits. Male pattern baldness and a rectangular lower half of the face are Leo traits. An overall round shape, face more fuller than pure Leo types, even a bit of the “ Man in the Moon ” look are Cancer traits. Leo traits are consistent with rising sign and rising decan ruler Mars placed in Leo, co-present with the Moon. It appears that Moon/Leo in generosity with Sun/Cancer adds the Cancer influence to physiognomy which would not be present without this generosity condition.

Shape of the face presents a tapered chin with the triangular shape the dominant building block of multiple aspects of the face. These observations are consistent with rising sign and rising decan ruler Mars in Virgo . Mars-retrograde either does not interfere with Virgo as the physiognomy significator or actually functions as Mars placed in the opposite sign of Pisces. I have always had trouble finding good examples of Willner's proposed fluid triangular shape for Pisces. Perhaps the double chin (a Pisces trait) confirms Willner's fluid triangle. I cannot tell. Either way, Mars remains the physiognomy significator.

Face presents the ovate shape which appears either a match to the bony ovate of Aries OR the ovate of Capricorn . This horoscope is an interesting comparison to #3 where Moon/Aries in the rising sign in mutual reception with Mars/Cancer yields the bony ovate of Aries. In this example, Moon/Aries is also in the rising sign but is overcome by Mars/Capricorn at the superior square aspect. To me, I give Capricorn a slight edge over Aries because of the well-defined bone structure. Finally, Lichnerowicz appears a good example of Judith Hill's New Moon lunar type, a match to the Moon's placement near the Ascendant degree. Why Moon/Aries in the rising sign yields a lunar influence in this example, but not in #3, is a weakness of this observation.

The lean shape of the face is a reasonable delineation match to the bony ovate , consistent with Aries rising. However there is no evidence that Mars/Aquarius yields the rectangular shape of Aquarius in the rising decan model. Instead, male pattern baldness , a Leo trait, is observed. Either the rising decan model is incorrect, or with a rounded birthtime to the nearest hour raising questions on birthtime accuracy, a later birthtime with 10-19 Aries rising would yield Leo as the rising decan. This would be a better match to male pattern baldness.

Face presents a broad forehead and a narrow jawline , consistent with the bony ovate of Aries , the rising sign. The rising decan model predicts a Virgo influence with ruler of the rising decan Sun placed in Virgo, co-present with Mercury and Venus. Yet other than a slightly narrow nose relative to the width of the face , I find no distinctive Virgo traits – with a case for the ‘tapered chin’ of Virgo a possible misreading for the ‘narrow jawline’ of Aries. Another vote against Virgo are the large lips which is the opposite of what one would expect with the drawn facial features of Virgo. Note that rising sign ruler Mars (amplified by the North Node) overcomes the Virgo stellia. It’s possible that Mars/Gemini overcoming Virgo planets at the superior square aspect minimizes the Virgo influence on physiognomy.

An argument can be made for Aries based on the hollowed-out cheeks but the prominent chin and white hair (at a younger age than average) are more goat-like to me than Arian. Certainly Mars/Aries conjunct the rising degree influences physiognomy – but this influence appears more on the shape of the body rather than the shape of the face. DeLorean's body was thin and ramrod straight, consistent with Aries as the physiognomy significator for the body. Placement of South Node in sign of rising decan (Sagittarius) does not interfere with Jupiter as the physiognomy significator. Perhaps South Node interferes with the hair length, but this is a speculative observation. Face presents a rectangular shape with prominent cheekbones , an angular lower jaw , and curly hair . These are Leo traits, consistent with rising decan ruler Jupiter/Leo-retrograde with the retrograde condition failing to interfere with Leo physiognomy. Alternatively, if the birth time were earlier so that the true Ascendant degree were between 10AR – 19AR, then the rising decan would change from Sagittarius to Leo, a possible delineation match to Leo as the physiognomy significator. Apart from these Leo traits, Quivrin presents a rectangular-shaped forehead like a bull dozer's blade . Face presents a high and full forehead (see survey of online photos), prominent cheekbones , and the compressed ovate shape. These are Libra traits, consistent with rising sign and decan ruler Venus/Aries-retrograde functioning as though placed in the opposite sign of Libra. Venus is co-present with Mercury (also retrograde) and the Sun. Sun/Aries nevertheless does add leanness to the face – notice the cheeks are drawn – a common trait for the bony ovate of Aries . But the primary shape of the face is Libra with Aries a secondary overlay.

Face is somewhat elongated (see survey of online photos) but not as much as other Gemini faces in this study. Hair is fine/wavy , mouth is small/thin-lipped . But the nose is not as long as other Gemini examples and the forehead is more broad than high . Some of the traits are a match to Gemini but as I have equivocated just now, this judgment can be debated. Sun /Taurus in the rising sign cannot be overlooked as a contributor to physiognomy. It is possible that Vainio's face is a Gemini-Taurus blend with the elongated shapes of Gemini shortened though the influence of Taurus. I rate this a difficult judgment.

Ovate is a reasonable guess for the shape of the face, though the beard which obscures the lower half of the face prevents a complete judgment. Self-portrait at right shows a round shape when tracing the silhouette of the hair. Skin texture is soft, there is an absence of any bony facial features, and the skin itself is pasty white if not luminous. These are Cancer traits. These observations are consistent with Taurus rising and sign/decan ruler Venus in Cancer. There is no evidence that Venus/Cancer-retrograde functions as though placed in the opposite sign of Capricorn – in which case bony features, including the chin (or chin beard) would be prominent. Note this is a rounded to-the-hour birth time. If the Ascendant degree were 10TA or later, the rising decan would shift to Virgo with Mercury/Cancer the ruler of the rising decan. With Mercury/Cancer in direct motion, we would expect a more direct presentation of Cancer traits (as the photo and painting present) rather than with Venus/Cancer-retrograde.

Hairstyle in this photograph makes the face appear more square than rectangular , but a survey of online photos shows a rectangular shape. As rectangular is common to all fixed signs, it is difficult to match the shape of Ferrero's face to a specific physiognomy significator. I say this because the survey of online photos presents so many hairstyles and camera angles that the survey looks like more than one person is displayed. In theory as ruler of the rising decan, Mercury/Aquarius-retrograde should present either Aquarius, Leo, or a mix of those traits; especially since both luminaires share the Leo-Aquarius axis. But I cannot make a definitive judgment other than a rectangular shape is consistent with a fixed sign rising and four planets in fixed signs.

Face presents a mix of Taurus and Aquarius traits. The configuration of rising sign ruler Venus/Aquarius applying to the sextile of rising decan ruler Saturn/Aries links the two major physiognomy significators. In some cases, it can be difficult to distinguish between the broad forehead of Aries and the rectangular-shaped forehead of Aquarius. In the photo at left, were it not for the prominent lower jaw, I would lean towards Aries as the physiognomy significator. But there is no question that a survey of online photos presents the face as rectangular . Arguably soft features and a soft rectangular shape suggest Taurus ; though I give a slight edge to Aquarius . In the right photo, notice a center part hairstyle with small waves which mimic the waves in the Aquarius glyph . Sometimes the Aquarius waves present as wrinkles in the forehead; here, I suggest they appear as wavy hair.

Face presents as the bony ovate of Aries . Notable is the classic ovate shape with hollowed out cheeks , not a sign of emaciation but a sign of leanness from physical activity. Moreover, nearly all photographs present straight hair, pointed up, sometimes in an inverse arrowhead shape ; this hairstyle is very Arian in nature. These observations make Jupiter/Aries the physiognomy significator. However, Jupiter is not identified as a physiognomy significator based on the model tested in the study. Either the model fails for Beckham or this is an incorrect birth time. What role the mutual reception between Moon/Capricorn and Saturn/Cancer plays in physiognomy I cannot say, but this configuration should be considered for future study.

Face presents as round, plump, and fleshy. These are Pisces traits. While this is a possible delineation match to rising decan ruler Saturn/Virgo-rx functioning as though placed in the opposite sign of Pisces, many people add flesh as they age so this is not a definitive judgment. The safer delineation match is to Capricorn , the rising decan itself, with most online photos demonstrating an ovate shape during mid-years.

Moon/Taurus in the rising sign applies in a partile sextile aspect to Venus/Cancer, with mutual reception by sign. Lower section of the face is round . Nose and lips are full with Harris demonstrating a “ Lady in the Moon ” look. These observations are Taurus and Cancer traits. Rising decan ruler Saturn/Libra-retrograde does not appear to generate Libra or Aries traits, unless one argues for the compressed ovate of Libra. I judge the Moon/Venus configuration overtakes all other planets as primary physiognomy signifiers.

Face presents a mix of Cancer, Capricorn, and Scorpio traits. Shape of faced is ovate consistent with rising sign ruler Venus in Cancer , co-present with the Sun; also with Capricorn as the rising decan amplified by Jupiter/Capricorn-retrograde by position. The round eyelids which mimic the shape of the New Moon and the protruding ears can make the case for both Cancer and Capricorn . I cannot choose. Finally, hair is coarse , eyes show a penetrating gaze , and there is a sharp contrast between the dark bushy eyebrows and the skin complexion of the forehead . These are all Scorpio traits, consistent with Saturn/Scorpio-retrograde and Mars/Scorpio opposed to the Ascendant degree.

Face is elongated , matching an above average height for the torso of 6' 11". With Saturn/ Sagittarius -retrograde capable of acting as if placed in the opposite sign of Gemini , it is difficult to choose between Sagittarius or Gemini as the correct physiognomy significator. I lean towards Gemini because Lambeer never wore his hair long and free-flowing which is a common physiognomy trait for Sagittarius. In addition, when not smiling, his mouth is relatively small and appears thin-lipped . If correct, this observation favors Gemini over Sagittarius.

Shape of face is rectangular , common to all fixed signs including Taurus , sign placement of Mars as ruler of the rising decan. Whether or not the face presents the soft rectangular shape of Taurus is questionable. Note Mars is co-present with Saturn, both amplified by the North Node. Edwards appears a mix of Gemini and Cancer traits. More rectangular than the pure elongated rectangular shape of Gemini , the face nevertheless presents a high forehead , fine/wavy hair , a long/aquiline nose , and a small, thin-lipped mouth (see other online photos). Face is somewhat luminous and in some online photos presents a round shape in the lower portion of the face, as if the roundness of Cancer is an overlay on top of a slightly stunted rectangular shape of Gemini. The mutual reception between rising sign ruler Moon/Gemini and Mercury/Cancer is most likely responsible for this mix of physiognomy significators. Rising sign ruler Moon is co-present with rising decan ruler Mars, Sun, and Jupiter. Both luminaries in Gemini exert a decidedly strong Gemini influence on physiognomy.

Were it not for the angular lower jaw, the face would match the rising decan model with the bony ovate of Aries consistent with rising decan ruler Jupiter in Aries, co-present with the Sun. Do note that the cheeks are drawn (not puffy) which is what gives rise to the arrowhead shape/bony ovate of a pure Aries facial type. Hair is straight which is an Aries trait. Setting aside the rising decan model, it is possible to make the case that the angular lower jaw frames the lower half of the soft rectangular shape of Taurus . Venus is placed in Taurus and as bound ruler of the Sun may be capable of exerting an influence on physiognomy, though not via the rising decan model. The center part hairstyle is a Cancer trait and consistent with Cancer rising.

Face presents a mix of Cancer , Pisces , and Scorpio traits. Lower section of the faced is consistently round in photographs. This is consistent with either Cancer as the rising sign, Pisces as the rising decan, or rising sign ruler Moon in Pisces . Each of these configurations is capable of generating round shapes though the lack of excessive fleshiness suggests Cancer rising is the most likely of these three significators. As to the role of rising decan ruler Jupiter/Taurus-retrograde. Given Olsen's beard and moustache worn in his post-NFL career which are Scorpio traits, Jupiter/Taurus-retrograde most likely functions as though placed in the sign of Scorpio. Yet, Saturn co-present with Jupiter, also retrograde, most likely retards Scorpio's influence on physiognomy, otherwise the shape of the faced would be more rectangular. I rate this a difficult reading.

Face is ovate which applies to both Cancer and Capricorn . There is no evidence of the 'small ovate' of Cancer though placement of Jupiter/Cancer closely conjunct the Ascendant degree is capable of offsetting the small ovate of Cancer because of Jupiter's largesse. With rising sign ruler Moon/Capricorn angular in the 7 th house applying to Jupiter/Cancer, it is also possible to make the case for Capricorn. I cannot make a definitive judgment between the two signs as physiognomy signifiers.

Though the presence of the beard obscures the shape of the lower jaw for a definitive physiognomy judgment, shape of the face appears rectangular with high cheekbones and male pattern baldness . All are Leo traits consistent with rising decan ruler Jupiter placed in the sign of Leo. With a Cancer stellia in the rising sign which includes rising sign ruler Moon/Cancer, one could make the case for Cancer as a physiognomy significator given the round shape presented by the silhouette of his hair around the scalp as well as a somewhat round beard. However, prominent cheekbones, assigned to Leo and not Cancer (which presents as the absence of a bony facial structure), does favor Leo over Cancer in my opinion.

Overall shape of face, head, and lower jaw is round . In this example, it can be debated whether the round billiard ball shape of the head , marked by male pattern baldness , is attributed to Leo as the rising sign; or whether the roundness which extends to the shape of eyebrows, glasses lenses, and shape of lower face and beard is attributable to Pisces with rising decan ruler Sun co-present with Mercury and Venus. The lack of plumpness and male pattern baldness favors Leo. Yet the lack of a rectangular face with prominent cheekbones and the lack of a angular lower jaw favors Pisces. Face presents a mix of Leo and Scorpio traits. Overall shape of face is rectangular with prominent cheekbones and an angular lower jaw . These traits are common to both signs. Complexion is slightly dark with the dark bushy eyebrows creating a color palette contrast between the eyebrows and the forehead , both Scorpio traits. Placement of Sun/Leo in the rising sign strongly accentuates the Leo influence on physiognomy. Jupiter/Scorpio as rising decan ruler appears a secondary influence.

Face appears a mix of Leo and Aquarius traits. The forehead is prominent, but its framing is less rectangular (Aquarius) and more rounded (Leo) at the top. Mixed reading. It is possible that Mercury/Taurus-retrograde functions in the opposite sign of Scorpio, to the extent that Mercury/Scorpio is consistent with Earnhardt's moustache , a Scorpio trait. Nose and mouth are very narrow relative to the width of the face, one of the best examples of drawn facial features in this database. This is a classic Virgo trait. Mercury is co-present with the South Node and Venus which both negate (South Node) and accentuate (Venus) the influence of Virgo as a physiognomy significator. The question is whether Domenech's face is ovate or actually the compressed ovate of Libra, consistent with rising decan ruler Saturn/Libra-retrograde? While this is possible, if Domenech does present the compressed ovate, it is not as obvious as found in other Libra examples in this study.

Face presents the rectangular shape common to fixed signs and Saturn/Scorpio-retrograde ruling the rising decan. Does Saturn/ Scorpio manifest as the physiognomy significator? (e.g., moustache and beard) or does Saturn/Scorpio-retrograde function as though placed in Taurus ? (e.g., soft rectangular shape), reinforcing the Taurus contribution of rising sign ruler Mercury/Taurus co-present with Sun and North Node? It is difficult to distinguish between these two interpretations.

Face presents a mix of Virgo and Pisces traits. Face features a tapered/upturned chin which is a Virgo trait. While the face is not overly fleshy there is still enough skin so that several folds of skin appear between the chin and neck , a Pisces trait. While I find Willner's fluid triangle for Pisces the least successful of his facial shape-sign models, arguably this is one of the better examples of the fluid triangle. Notice there are two creases which frame either side of the chin and mouth which can be modeled as two stacked triangles. Triangle building blocks of physiognomy are commonly found among mutable signs.

Mercury co-present with Venus adds to the Cancer influence on physiognomy. But the above photo arguably presents a rectangular face, prominent cheekbones , and a lion's mane hairstyle . These are Leo traits which can be accounted for either by the sextile aspect Saturn/Leo and Sun/Leo make to the Ascendant degree OR an error in birthtime which if slightly later would shift the Ascendant degree range to 10LI-19LI making Aquarius the rising decan ruled by Saturn/Leo.

This is a Libra trait, consistent with rising sign and decan ruler Venus in Libra, co-present with Mars and Jupiter. Other photos of Clinton, taken both as a young man and during his post-Presidency argue for the influence of Leo on physiognomy with a pompadour hairstyle and a fuller face than what Libra would suggest alone. The rising decan model highlights Libra as a physiognomy significator, but it does not pick up the three planet Leo stellia. Only if one accepts the close sextile aspect of Mercury and Saturn to the Ascendant degree can we link Leo to the rising sign as a physiognomy significator.

Face presents as round, plump , and is arguably a match to Willner's fluid triangular shape assigned to Pisces , consistent with rising sign and decan ruler Venus in Pisces. Notice the round shape of Pisces is mimicked by the shape of the hat, hair and handwarmers. A survey of online photographs also makes a good case the overall shape of the face is the compressed ovate of Libra and that Pisces' influence on physiognomy is secondary.

Face presents a mix of Libra and Aquarius traits. Overall shape of face is the compressed ovate with a high and full forehead , prominent cheekbones , and the absence of any irregular features . These are all Libra traits. It is possible the forehead presents the rectangular-shape like a bull dozer's blade, an Aquarius trait, but I have difficulty in distinguishing between the high and full forehead of Libra and the bull dozer's blade of Aquarius.

Lower face is tapered to the chin. This is either a Virgo or an Aries trait. If Aries, then South Node/Libra closely conjunct the Ascendant degree flips the physiognomy significator to the North Node/Aries in the Descendant. That's a fairly speculative observation but would not completely rule it out. More likely is the tapered chin of Virgo ; in any case the narrow width of both nose and mouth are indisputable Virgo traits. This is consistent with the rising decan ruler Saturn placed in Virgo. Also note the protruding ears which are supposed to be a Capricorn trait yet there are not planets in Capricorn in the horoscope.

Face presents as the compressed ovate of Libra , yet less compressed than other Libra examples in this study. Other Libra features include a forehead high and full and prominent cheekbones . This is most likely an airbrushed publicity photo so some facial features may not have survived the editing process. Consider Ascendant ruler Venus/Sagittarius-retrograde functioning like Venus/Gemini in the opposite sign. Given that both Sagittarius and Gemini are elongated signs; it is possible that Venus contributes a slightly elongated face compared to the classic compressed ovate of Libra ; e.g., White's face can be classified as a compressed ovate shape which is somewhat stretched out.

Face presents as square with a rectangular-shaped forehead like a bull dozer's blade . There are also wavy creases in the forehead which mimic the Aquarius glyph . All are Aquarius traits with Blake a textbook example of all identifiable Aquarius traits in a single face. Saturn/Aquarius-retrograde does not interfere with the ability of Aquarius to function as the physiognomy significator. Placement of North Node in bound of Saturn/Aquarius in the sign of the rising decan accentuates the Aquarius influence on physiognomy.
Technical note: I want to emphasize the square shape of Aquarius in Willner's model as Willner assigns the square to only the fixed sign of Aquarius with the rectangle assigned to the other fixed signs. I rarely see Willner's square, even in Aquarius, but if Willner is correct then Blake is a good example of the Aquarius square.

Face presents the compressed ovate with a high and full forehead , prominent cheekbones , and an absence of irregular features . These are Libra traits consistent with rising sign and rising decan ruler Mars placed in Libra, co-present with the Sun. While Mercury and Saturn are closely conjunct the Ascendant degree, they do not appear as physiognomy signifiers. Instead, the Mercury-Saturn conjunction signifies the quick wit and cutting remarks so necessary for Carson's success as a comedian and an interview host.

With Scorpio the hairiest sign, Levavasseur has perhaps the hairiest moustache and beard among any in this sample of 432. While this is a Scorpio trait, influence on shape of the face is difficult to judge because the hair partially conceals the shape of the face. Yet the face fits the Scorpio trait of thickness , a pattern which is replicated in the shape of entire torso. Mars is co-present with Jupiter and North Node in the Ascendant which accentuate Scorpio traits on physiognomy.

Sun and Mercury co-present with Mars accentuates the Aries influence on physiognomy. Can a case be made that Gemini also reflects a broad forehead and an elongated rectangular shape which is tapered from the influence of Aries as an overlay? Possibly, but not certain unless one adds Grey's playful 'elf-like' vibe to the list of Gemini signifiers. Also: prominent ears are a Capricorn trait, but there are no planets in Capricorn nor is Capricorn the rising sign or decan.

Shape of face is combination of Scorpio (rectangular) and Cancer (ovate). Upper face is rectangular , hair is thick , and the nose is large . These are Scorpio traits. Cheeks are round and complexion is smooth , both testimonies for Cancer . I favor assignment of the round face to Cancer as the rising decan rather than Ascendant sign ruler Mars placed in Leo because Anastasia does not have male pattern baldness, a signature Leo trait. In addition, rising decan ruler Moon/Cancer is in its sign of rulership and in the sign of the rising decan. For this reason, it cannot be ascertained whether the shape of the face is square/rectangular (Scorpio/Aquarius) or the bony ovate (Ascendant ruler Mars in Aries). Face presents the dark complexion/intense eyes of Scorpio – an effect maintained by eyeliner makeup in the photo at right. Shape of face is ovate , a match to Cancer as the rising decan. But the overall appearance is pained with prominent skin creases in the right photo. While creases naturally occur with old age, I still judge the overall countenance marked by the melancholic nature of Saturn/Scorpio closely conjunct the Ascendant degree. See that Moon/Pisces, ruler of the rising decan, applies within 2 degrees to the trine of Saturn. It is likely this configuration prevents the Moon's typical contribution of a round and fleshy face type because Saturn overwhelms the Moon as a physiognomy significator.

Face is ovate ; skin complexion is white and pasty . Ovate is common to all cardinal signs; complexion is consistent with Cancer . There is no evidence of a 'small' ovate, perhaps reflecting Mars/Cancer-rx to function in the opposing sign of Capricorn which is a pure ovate shape. Note Mars/Cancer is retrograde in the same sign as the South Node and the opposing North Node/Capricorn is co-present with Mercury and the Sun. Whether or not Mars/Cancer-rx yields a Cancer or Capricorn physiognomy is open to debate; however, Mars is certainly the physiognomy significator. There is no evidence that Venus and Saturn near the Ascendant degree exert an influence on physiognomy.

Face appears a mix of Aries and Libra traits. Is the face signified by the bony ovate of Aries ? Or the compressed ovate of Libra ? This is a confusing horoscope because both rising ruler Saturn/Libra and rising decan ruler Venus/Aries are retrograde – which means both planets can contribute to their own sign or the opposite sign as physiognomy signifiers. Other planets don't necessarily help with Moon/Libra adding a Libra influence and Mercury/Aries adding an Aries influence. A mixed horoscope. Influence of three planet Taurus stellia in the sign of the rising decan is not evident.

For a sculptor whose career included making cosmetic masks for “broken faces” of disfigured World War I soldiers, it is notable that a sculpted head bust appears the default image for Poupelet on Astrodatabank and Wikipedia. Only two actual photographs of Poupelet were found online. There is a connection between the rising sign of Capricorn and rocks generally and sculpture specifically. Photo (left) presents the head with an ovate shape from a side profile. Photo (right) demonstrates the soft rectangular of Taurus consistent with rising decan ruler Venus placed in Taurus. While it is true that the beard obscures the shape of the chin for a definitive judgment on the shape of the face; in my opinion the shape of the triangular beard itself is sufficient evidence to judge the triangular shape proposed for Virgo by John Willner. In addition, Lippmann has an oval/round upper head , another Virgo trait. With Virgo as rising decan and ruler Mercury also present in Virgo, we should expect a relatively pure presentation of Virgo physiognomy. Mercury is co-present with Venus which accentuates the Virgo influence.

Face presents a high and full forehead , prominent cheekbones , and the absence of irregular features . These are all Libra traits. This is consistent with rising decan ruler Mercury in Libra, co-present with Mars and the South Node. While Mercury is retrograde, note that Jupiter/Aries in the opposite sign is also retrograde which may flip the influence back from Aries to Libra. Beyond these specific facial features, I hesitate to assign the compressed ovate shape to Jonas. Compared to other Libra examples, his face appears longer, most likely due to the effect of Ascendant ruler Saturn in Sagittarius whose shape is the elongated rectangle. Both nose and mouth are narrow relative to the width of the face ; both Virgo traits , the rising decan itself.

These are all Scorpio traits consistent with rising decan ruler Mercury placed in Scorpio. Mercury is co-present with the Moon which adds to the Scorpio influence. While Calle does not have the dark complexion of Scorpio, a survey of online photos reveals the consistent use of shadows and tinted eyeglasses designed to obscure the face; arguably this is the way a dark complexion manifests (through accessories and lighting) when it does not present directly in the face on a standalone basis.

If Mercury/Sagittarius-retrograde functions as Mercury/Gemini, this would be consistent with the high forehead , a Gemini trait (and not a Sagittarius trait). Mercury co-present with Mars, Sun, and Jupiter in Sagittarius should increase the Sagittarius influence though it is difficult to distinguish between the two signs other the high forehead which favors Gemini.

Shape of face is triangular, not square as suggested by Aquarius rising or the rising decan ruler in Scorpio. The only Scorpio facial feature is prominent bangs which frame either side of the face resembling a scorpion's pincers . While this is a sufficient match for the influence of the ruler of the rising decan, I usually like to see more indications. Influence of Mercury and Venus in the rising sign is not evident. Alternate: Note the birthtime is rounded to the nearest half hour. Were the Ascendant degree in late Capricorn, the rising decan would be Virgo. In that case, Jupiter/Virgo-retrograde placed in the sign of the rising decan would be the logical physiognomy significator. With a functional placement in the opposite sign of Pisces, Jupiter/Virgo-retrograde is a better match for the fluid triangular shape of the face assigned to Pisces.

Face is round, plump , lacks structure in the lower face near the chin; all Pisces traits consistent with Saturn as ruler of the Ascendant and rising decan. The round facial shape is mirrored in the silhouette made by the outline of Picabia's hair. How to account for the Sun-North Node-Venus-Jupiter stellia in the rising sign? Photo at right by Man Ray captures a slightly different profile which demonstrates the rectangular-shaped forehead of Aquarius, mirrored by broad-rectangular shoulders. Aquarius, more so than Pisces, adds thickness rather than fleshiness; e.g., additional body mass contributed by Aquarius is relatively more dense than for Pisces. Face is rectangular and appears a mix of Taurus and Scorpio traits. Rising decan ruler Mercury/Scorpio-retrograde predicts a mix of Scorpio and Taurus traits should Mercury/Scorpio-retrograde function as in the opposite sign of Taurus. In favor of Taurus are thick lips , evident among a survey of online photographs. In addition, the soft edges of an otherwise rectangular face , mimicked by the rounded edges on corners of his eyewear do suggest the soft rectangular shape of Taurus . If I hedge here, it is because the nose is slightly beak-like, more Scorpio, and the gaze of the eyes can be intense, another Scorpio trait. In any case, Mercury remains the simplest physiognomy signifier to account for these features. I do not see any evidence the Moon/Mars/Saturn stellia in Leo opposed to the Ascendant degree contributes to physiognomy.

As to the overall shape of the face, I hesitate to say the face is the square shape of Aquarius; it appears more like the elongated rectangle of Gemini and Sagittarius. Shape of face is the bony ovate of Aries with a broad forehead and a narrow/pointed jawline . Moon/Aries co-present with Venus accentuates the Aries influence on physiognomy. While the Aquarius Ascendant is also capable of contributing a broad rectangular forehead , Aries is capable of doing so alone so Aquarius may or may not be a physiognomy signifier. Contribution to physiognomy of Jupiter in the Ascendant sign is not obvious.

Note that Saturn/Capricorn-rx functions like Saturn/Cancer – with its functional placement of 11CA47 within a degree of the antiscia of Jupiter 17GE32. It is possible that the influence of Saturn, via antiscia, nullifies the ability of Jupiter/Gemini to manifest as the physiognomy signifier for the shape of the face. Going further, since Pannella's face has a the “ Man in the Moon ” look, one can argue that Saturn's functional placement in Cancer more accurately describes the shape of the face.

Physiognomy is ambiguous and inconsistent across career photographs. This is unsurprising with four angular planets in mutable signs. Shape of face is the compressed ovate of Libra consistent with ruler of the rising decan Moon placed in Libra, co-present with Saturn. Other Libra factors: forehead high and full and the absence of irregular features . Rising decan Cancer itself contributes a round face/hair silhouette , the absence of a bony facial structure , a luminous complexion , and a “Lady in the Moon” look . The full Moon phase yields a fuller face. Influence of Mercury/Pisces-rx conjunct Ascendant degree is not obvious.

Face is plump/fleshy , a Pisces trait, consistent with the rising sign. But the overall shape appears more rectangular, thick , with a dark complexion , all Scorpio traits, consistent with ruler of the rising decan Moon placed in Scorpio, co-present with Venus. Both Mars and Jupiter in the sign of the rising decan do not appear to be physiognomy signifiers. Since Mars and Jupiter are enemies, they may cancel each other out.

Shape of face is the elongated rectangle, horse-shaped , a match to rising decan ruler the Moon placed in Sagittarius . Saturn placed in the Ascendant restrains the otherwise phlegmatic contribution of Pisces as the rising sign and Cancer as the rising decan. Without Saturn's placement, the face would be fuller.

Shape of face is ovate if not round , a match to rising decan ruler Moon placed in Capricorn . Note the Moon is late in the 2 nd quarter approaching the Full Moon phase. Close proximity to the Full Moon accounts for the round shape ; with a narrow face more likely were the Moon in either 1 st or 4 th quarters. There is a ' Man in the Moon ' look. Contributions of Venus and Mars both in Cancer, sign of the rising decan, is not obvious.

Cancer features include: center part hairstyle and a small head relative to the torso. Moon in the 4 th quarter waning phase is consistent with the narrow width of Verhofstadt's face compared to other Cancer decans in this study. Other photos show face creases, which on first appearance suggest the influence of Saturn, but are the result of a Moon with little light (Hill, p. 59). Lunar features are accentuated with the Moon closely conjunct the Ascendant degree. Mercury, co-present with the Moon, appears overwhelmed by the Moon as a physiognomy significator – but note the hand gestures in this photo which suggest above average activity for hands ruled by Mercury in his house of joy.

Shape of face is the bony ovate of Aries , sign of Mars as the ruler of the rising decan. Arian influence is accentuated by Sun co-present with Mars . Lopez presents the complete list of Taurus physiognomy descriptors: shape of face is soft rectangular , high forehead , low cheeks , absence of bony facial structure ; both nose and lips are oversized relative to the width of the face ; and the neck is thick . Hill (p. 74) also reports dimples as a special mark of Venus. Note that Mars as rising decan ruler placed in the sign of Taurus accounts for these features with no interference from Mars' retrograde condition. It is possible that Scorpio as the rising decan presents as thick hair .

Although it is a judgment call whether the elongated rectangle shape of Gemini applies here, most other Gemini traits are present: high forehead, fine/wavy hair, long/aquiline nose, and a small mouth . See that Mars/Gemini is cazimi and co-present with Mercury and Venus. Jupiter/Sagittarius-retrograde functions as Jupiter/Gemini, adding to the Gemini influence which is very strong. With regard to both Moon and Saturn near the Ascendant degree, the influence of the Moon appears stronger with a “ Man in the Moon ” look overtaking the Gemini influence on the shape of the face.

Starr presents a mix of Scorpio and Leo traits. In middle years, hair is thick and hair texture is coarse . He wears a moustache and a combination moustache and beard in later years. Nose is large , eyes have penetrating gaze , and complexion is slightly dark . Shape of the face, however, appears a better match to Leo with prominent cheek bones and his thick and coarse Scorpio hair resembling a lion's mane . Cheek bones are more easily identified in both early and later years with a more clean-cut hairstyle.

For the stated birth time, Brady's round and plump/fleshy face is consistent with Pisces as the Ascendant sign. There are no visible Scorpio contributions to physiognomy. As ruler of the rising decan, Mars/ Virgo cazimi co-present with Mercury yields a nose and lips which are drawn, narrow relative to the width of the face .
Alternate: Since Pisces is a sign of short-ascension (moves very quickly), there is a chance that the actual birth time was a few minutes earlier, prior to 20PI00, making Cancer the rising decan. Brady does in fact have a “Man in the Moon” look which would be a better match to the physiognomy model with both Moon and Venus in the sign of the rising Cancer decan. But this is speculation.

With Adalbert's other online photos littered by distorting copyright notices from Alamy and Getty, this photo is the best to work with. While the large size of Adalbert's body is clearly influenced by Pisces ruled by Jupiter in the fixed sign of Scorpio (which likes to hoard), the face has a much better fit to Mars/Capricorn-retrograde as the ruler of the rising decan. Capricorn presents as tufts of hair on his chin like a billy goat . But the overall shape of the face is round, white, and luminous with Mars/Capricorn-retrograde functioning like Mars in Cancer . See also that both Sun and Saturn are in Cancer which accentuates the Cancer influence on physiognomy. Were the true birthtime a few minutes earlier, Cancer would be the rising decan.

Face is square with a rectangular-shaped forehead like a bull dozer's blade . These are both Aquarius traits. In the full body shot from which this head shot is cropped, the rectangular shape extends to the outline of his overcoat which frames his torso. Both Mercury and Saturn (Mars' ruler) placed in the Ascendant sign yield a plump/fleshy appearance [instead of an austere Saturn look] most likely because Jupiter overcomes Saturn at the superior square aspect which nullifies Saturn's austerity.

Scorpio characteristics of the rising decan present as a rectangular face and hair which is thick and coarse. Moon/Scorpio in sign of the rising decan accentuates these Scorpio traits. Alternatively, the Aquarian rectangular-shaped forehead like a bull dozer's blade is consistent with Ascendant sign ruler Jupiter/Leo-retrograde functioning like Jupiter/Aquarius as another physiognomy significator. As Jupiter rules the Mars-Mercury-Sun-North Node stellia in the Ascendant, Jupiter's influence cannot be ignored.
